BANKRUPTCY AND LITIGATION

Jennifer L. Pruski is a shareholder in the Litigation, Property Management, and Bankruptcy Departments of Trainor Fairbrook. Her primary areas of practice are business disputes, bankruptcy, property management and real property litigation. She has also earned a specialty in Creditor's Rights. She regularly represents property owners in lease disputes, partners in business disputes and creditors in bankruptcy. Ms. Pruski also has extended her representation to international banks relating to real and personal property foreclosures, collection work and the sale of commercial properties. She manages and supervises the litigation and collection efforts for a local Sacramento Valley property owner and developer.

Ms. Pruski is a big believer in dedicating herself wholeheartedly to her work: "Be the best. We live and work by this mantra. Every attorney at Trainor Fairbrook invests in themselves to continually add to their education and experience, and invests time in the real estate community, including various trade organizations. Every attorney has a special interest or group they participate in. And I pride myself on being available every day for my clients, either as a sounding board, or to provide creative solutions to resolve disputes."

Ms. Pruski previously represented joint venture partners in a lengthy binding arbitration relating to land valued at $52.5 million, which resulted in dissolution of joint venture. She also represented international banking corporation in obtaining possession of REO property from alleged tenant and others occupying said property. Ultimately, the court awarded possession of the property. In addition, she has significant experience obtaining favorable pre-trial motions—she represented a national real estate development corporation in a lawsuit brought by former tenant alleging breach of contract, promissory fraud, negligent misrepresentation, rescission, reformation and declaratory relief. A summary judgment was granted on all causes of action.
